Anita Ghulam Ali World Teachers’ Day Award 2014

on

“Inclusive Education”

The AGA WTD award was launched in 2008 to commemorate and salute a living legend Professor Anita Ghulam Ali (Sitara-e-Imtiaz) – an active citizen par excellence. It is a special year since Professor Anita Ghulam Ali passed away on August 8, 2014 – remaining for all of us the living legend she was then and an activist for teachers' status in multiple ways.

For WTD 2014 the theme for the award is “inclusive education”. The theme will focus on teachers across Pakistan in all sub-sectors of education to share what they have accomplished to address inclusion practically in their classrooms, schools and world views. The award will extend to schools and institutions for different ability students as well as mainstream schools where teachers have made conscious efforts to address the needs of the 'differently abled' students and colleagues.

The Criteria and Guidelines to the participating teachers are given in five progressive categories:

1. Inclusive practices that teachers implement in classrooms/institutions with clear description and evidence
2. The process adopted for designing and implementing them with clear steps explained and evidence on how do they know that these were successful – including recommendations/case studies - parental/guardians views and/or media coverage etc.
3. The element of sacrifice undertaken by teachers in terms of time, energy, preparation and resources expended
4. Any institutional affiliation/establishment, professional development and knowledge acquisition on inclusion that teachers can share with evidence
5. All Professional qualifications and years of professional practice of teachers in each institution (just give the past 10 years) with evidence
